FOREWORD

THE CHIEF AIM of the authors of the first edition of this dictionary was to address all those aspects of language confronting users in their daily lives. This radically new approach successfully catered to the needs of both the scholar and the general reader.

In order to provide full coverage of a language in all its complexity it is essential to consult the widest possible range of texts, and in compiling this dictionary the authors have drawn extensively from many sources, including newspapers and periodicals of both general and specialist nature, as well as literary works by the major authors writing in Spanish and English. Numerous new entries in this edition bear witness to the many recent advances in science and technology. Whilst the editors have been careful not to sacrifice tradition to modernity, ample space is given to current developments in the idiomatic and colloquial use of both languages, with particular attention to Spanish and English usage in the Americas, as distinct from European Spanish and British English. Some entries include special comments where the authors have felt this to be useful. The result is a reference work which will prove to be an invaluable tool for the many thousands of users who, for purposes of work or study, may wish to consult this dictionary.

The profound changes in contemporary society in terms of the creative media, cultural exchange and communication, are reflected in the 8 000 new items which have been added to the original text. Thus, while remaining faithful to the high ideals and quality of the first edition, this new edition constitutes a comprehensive and up-to-date reference work, indispensable to the understanding of current Spanish and English. Vocabulary from fields of knowledge such as nuclear energy and environmental studies appears in this edition for the first time, whilst the number of entries relating to other areas such as information technology, telecommunications, economics, medicine, biology and sport has greatly increased. Nevertheless, the aim of this work is not to provide a specialized dictionary, but rather to record, through the inclusion of new technical and scientific terms, the ways in which both Spanish and English are evolving as they become permeated by specialized vocabulary. Other, more general terms drawn from contemporary life and culture add a new, fully modern dimension to the dictionary. The reader will find in these pages the familiar, colloquial words and expressions, including slang, used in everyday life. The number of acronyms, abbreviations and geographical names, which appear for the first time in the main body of the dictionary, has been very considerably enlarged. Moreover, the incorporation of a full-colour bilingual atlas provides the reader with a synoptic view of the Spanish and English-speaking regions of the world.

There have been a number of modifications in the presentation and layout of the text. For instance, any change in grammatical category under a particular entry is now preceded by a lozenge. The dictionary has also been set in a new, clear type which makes it even more user-friendly.

We are confident that, like the parent edition, this revised and enlarged edition will meet with the approval and satisfaction of our readers, and we remind users that their comments and observations on the dictionary are, as always, most welcome.

THE EDITORS

PRÓLOGO

LA PRINCIPAL PREOCUPACIÓN de los autores de la primera edición de esta obra fue abarcar en todas sus manifestaciones la realidad lingüística con que el usuario pudiera llegar a encontrarse en su quehacer cotidiano y profesional, ambición no poco revolucionaria en aquella época. Este nuevo planteamiento supo responder a las expectativas de los estudiosos de la lengua inglesa y supuso un éxito indiscutible.

¿Cómo captar la totalidad de una realidad lingüística sin contar con un corpus lo más amplio posible? Para la constitución de dicho corpus se acudió a diarios y revistas de carácter general o especializadas, y a extractos de obras literarias de los más señalados autores en lengua española y en lengua inglesa. De los progresos realizados por la ciencia y la técnica dejan constancia los numerosos términos de especialidad recogidos en esta obra, en la que también tienen cabida los giros y expresiones coloquiales cuyo carácter y sabor propios se intenta conservar en las traducciones. Las variantes americanas tanto del español como del inglés, fiel reflejo de la importancia de la realidad americana, ocupan aquí un lugar por derecho propio. En algunos artículos, los autores ofrecen observaciones sobre dificultades de uno u otro idioma. El resultado de todo ello es una inapreciable herramienta de trabajo que ha servido a miles de usuarios en su estudio de la lengua inglesa.

Pero la sociedad de nuestro tiempo está experimentando una profunda transformación en cuanto a medios de creación, intercambio y comunicación. Movidos por la fidelidad a los principios de calidad que hicieron posible su éxito inicial, hemos enriquecido el texto de partida con 8 000 nuevas voces a fin de ofrecer una obra de consulta indispensable para la comprensión del español y el inglés de nuestros días. Algunas áreas de conocimiento — energía nuclear, medio ambiente — aparecen por primera vez en este diccionario, mientras que otras, informática, telecomunicaciones, economía, medicina, biología y deportes, ven ampliados sus horizontes terminológicos. Sin embargo, esta obra no trata de convertirse en un diccionario de especialidad; al introducir los nuevos términos técnicos y científicos sólo pretende dar testimonio de la evolución de la lengua y de su mayor permeabilidad y receptividad frente a los vocablos especializados. Sin pertenecer a ninguna materia en particular, algunas de las voces incorporadas confieren a esta obra una dimensión plenamente contemporánea. Ciertamente, el usuario podrá encontrar palabras familiares, incluso de argot, las mismas que puede oír en su entorno habitual. El número de siglas, abreviaturas y nombres geográficos, que a partir de ahora integran el cuerpo del diccionario, se ha visto considerablemente aumentado. Además, un atlas bilingüe en color brinda una perspectiva sinóptica de los ámbitos anglófono e hispanohablante.

También la presentación del texto ha sufrido modificaciones: cualquier cambio de categoría gramatical va ahora precedido de un rombo. Por si esto fuese poco, la nitidez de la tipografía y la elección de un tipo de letra de sobria elegancia y más legibilidad ofrecen una lectura cómoda y agradable.

Estamos persuadidos de que, al consultar la presente edición corregida y aumentada, los usuarios se sentirán tan satisfechos como con la anterior y confiamos en que nos comuniquen cuantos comentarios y observaciones consideren oportunos.

LOS EDITORES

EXPLANATORY NOTES

Order of material

1. The material has been arranged in alphabetical order, except where two words are equivalent in meaning and spelt similarly. The latter are entered at the same entry (e.g. estancación; estancamiento).

2. English compound words also appear alphabetically. For instance, dress circle is listed as a separate entry following and not included under the headword dress.

3. Variant British and American spellings are indicated (see behaviour).

4. No provision is made for regular adverbs, diminutives and augmentatives whose meaning is obvious from the stem word (e.g. fortunately).

5. Preterites, past participles and contracted forms are also listed in their own alphabetical order (see I'm). In the two former instances the user is referred to the infinitive of the verb (e.g. got pret/pp See get).

Phonetic transcription

Phonetic transcription, in square brackets after the headword, appears only in the English-Spanish part as, with very few exceptions, the pronunciation of Spanish is well represented by normal orthography (see chapter on PRONUNCIATION in the Summary of Spanish grammar). The symbols used are those of the International Phonetic Alphabet (see table on page VI, part II). Where British and American pronunciation differ, British comes first followed, after us, by American (e.g. schedule).

Grammatical information

1. The grammatical function of the headword is made clear using the abbreviations listed in full on pages VIII (part I) and V (part II).

2. Genders of Spanish nouns are printed in both parts of the dictionary and English nouns of common gender are translated into both masculine and feminine forms (e.g. baker n panadero, ra). Number is indicated only when it differs in translation (e.g. clothes pl n ropa f sing).

Number and gender are also recorded in the phrases at the end of entries (e.g. disturbance of the peace alteración f del orden público) except where the word treated has already been translated or where context suffices (e.g. disturbance in the night escándalo nocturno).

3. English irregular noun plurals are indicated at the end of entries in the English-Spanish part and Spanish plurals in the other part.

4. Words which can assume various functions (adjective, noun, adverb, etc.) are contained in the same article and appear preceded by a black lozenge (◆). Verbs, however, are treated separately (e.g. under right the adjective followed by the noun and adverb come under subheadings while the verb is covered in a separate entry).

5. Irregular verbs bear asterisks referring the reader to the Grammar Section which discusses conjugation of modes and tenses. Irregular forms of English verbs, chiefly preterites and past participles, are indicated where necessary at the end of the entries in the English-Spanish part.

6. When verbs, nouns or adjectives take different prepositions in the two languages, an indication is given in parenthesis or in the form of an example (see desdecir).

Differentiation of meanings

1. Translations of diverse meanings of headwords in all entries are separated by the symbol || and, in some cases, cross-references to relevant subject matter are provided (see lists of ABREVIATURAS on page VIII of part I and of ABBREVIATIONS on page V of part II). Where a word has several meanings pertaining to a single discipline, that discipline is indicated by an abbreviation only once at the beginning and the meanings are separated out using | symbol. Search lists are located before words with many meanings, to simplify use. To find the translation of estar para the user only need consult subheading 6 of the entry on estar (headed FOLLOWED BY A PREPOSITION) without having to read through the preceding items. The more common meanings are listed at the beginning of the entry.

2. Phrases and expressions are placed, in alphabetical order, immediately after the various meanings and are preceded by the || — symbol. The dash is omitted when there is only one phrase or expression.

3. Common English verbs that change their meaning when accompanied by some particles are printed in boldface in the same paragraph preceded by a black lozenge (◆) at the end of entries and placed between ||. Meanings are marked off with | and followed by phrases and expressions after || — (see the verb to go).

4. By way of guidance to the user on social usage of words and phrases, we have drawn a distinction between colloquial or familiar but acceptable terms FAM and vulgar or common parlance POP. These abbreviations are placed before the translation if they pertain to the word treated and after it if they apply to the equivalent word. For instance, the third application of the Spanish word jeta carries FAM to denote its colloquial nature. As a general rule, wherever possible, care has been taken in translation to reflect social register.

Clarification of meanings

Where words can assume several meanings each one is defined. Parentheses are used for definitions written in the language of the headword and square brackets for those which appear in the language of translations (see descubrimiento). The same procedure has been adopted when phrases have diverse meanings (e.g. to get sick would usually be the equivalent of «ponerse enfermo» but, when the reference is to travel sickness, the translation is «marearse»). As well as indications, which should be seen as such and not as synonyms, numerous examples are used. Where examples and phrases begin with the same words the latter are entered once only, the variant part following after the word «or» o «o» (e.g. edad de la razón or del juicio age of reason; to get o to come to the point ir al grano). Some expressions are not always used in full, in which case the words that can be omitted are placed in parentheses (e.g. hablando del rey de Roma por la pueria asoma talk of the devil (and he will appear)).

Additional notes

Additional explanatory notes are provided, in Spanish or in English as appropriate, to clarify the meaning of some words further, or peculiar usage, semantic evolution, irregular plurals, irregular verb forms or any other point requiring explanation (see menor).

Americanisms

In the light of the importance and growing influence today of the English- and Spanish-speaking nations of the New World, numerous Americanisms have been included in both parts of the dictionary. The abbreviations used are AMER before Latin American words or phrases and us before North American ones.

CÓMO USAR ESTE DICCIONARIO

Orden de las palabras

1. Las palabras siguen siempre un riguroso orden alfabético, pero, cuando dos voces tienen igual sentido y parecida ortografía, se reseñan en el mismo artículo (por ej., estancación; estancamiento).
2. Las palabras compuestas inglesas se registran también alfabéticamente. Así, dress circle figura a continuación de dress y no en el interior de este artículo.
3. Se indican las ortografías existentes en Gran Bretaña y los Estados Unidos (véase behaviour).
4. Los adverbios, diminutivos y aumentativos de formación regular, cuyos significados son fácilmente deducibles a partir de las palabras de las que se derivan, no se han estudiado (por ej. fortunately).
5. Se hace mención de los pretéritos y participios pasivos irregulares, lo mismo que de las contracciones, en el orden alfabético que les corresponde (véase I'm). En los dos primeros casos se remite al infinitivo del verbo (p. ej. got pret/pp See get).

Pronunciación figurada

La pronunciación figurada, colocada entre corchetes después del artículo, se indica solamente en la parte inglés-español y no en la otra, ya que las palabras se pronuncian en castellano tal y como se escriben, salvo contadas excepciones (véase PRONUNCIATION en Summary of Spanish grammar). Se ha utilizado el Alfabeto Fonético Internacional (véase pág. VI, 2.ª parte). Cuando la pronunciación difiere entre Gran Bretaña y Estados Unidos, se ha transcrito primero la inglesa y luego, tras us, la americana (por ej. schedule).

Indicaciones gramaticales

1. La naturaleza morfológica de cada palabra se señala con abreviaturas cuyas listas detalladas se encuentran en las págs. VIII (1.ª parte) y V (2.ª parte).
2. El género de los sustantivos españoles figura tanto en la primera como en la segunda parte y las palabras inglesas que son a la vez masculinas y femeninas están traducidas en las dos formas (por ej. baker equivale a panadero, ra). El número se precisa en la traducción únicamente si es diferente al de la palabra estudiada (por ej. clothes pl n ropa f sing).
3. Estas indicaciones existen igualmente en la traducción de las expresiones que vienen al final del artículo, por ej. disturbance of the peace alteración f del orden público, a menos que sea una palabra que ya figure en las acepciones o si el género y el número no ofrecen dudas gracias al contexto (por ej. disturbance in the night escándalo nocturno).
4. Una observación al final del artículo señala el plural irregular de ciertos sustantivos. En la parte español-inglés se encuentran los plurales españoles y en la otra los ingleses.
5. Cuando un mismo vocablo tiene varias funciones en la oración (adjetivo, sustantivo, adverbio, etc.), éstas van reunidas en el mismo artículo, precedidas de un rombo negro (◆), excepto en el caso del verbo que se trata separadamente (por ej. en right se estudia en primer lugar el adjetivo, el sustantivo y el adverbio, en varios apartados, y el verbo tiene otra entrada aparte).
6. Los verbos irregulares llevan un asterisco que remite al compendio de gramática en el que se da la conjugación de los distintos modos y tiempos. En la parte inglés-español, las irregularidades de los verbos ingleses, que se limitan generalmente al pretérito y participio pasivo, se indican en una observación al final del artículo.
7. Si el régimen de los verbos, sustantivos o adjetivos varía de un idioma a otro se señala entre paréntesis o mediante un ejemplo (véase desdecir).

Diferenciación de los sentidos

1. El signo || separa, en todos los artículos, las traducciones de cada acepción y existen a veces rúbricas para determinar las ma-

terias a las que pertenecen (véase lista de ABREVIATURAS, en la pág. VIII de la 1.ª parte, y la de ABBREVIATIONS en la pág. V de la 2.ª). Si un vocablo tiene varios sentidos correspondientes a una misma rúbrica, ésta figura solamente al principio y las acepciones sólo están separadas por el signo |. Las palabras que poseen numerosos significados van precedidas por un cuadro destinado a clasificar las diversas acepciones y facilitar así la tarea del lector. Si se intenta traducir estar para, basta consultar el párrafo 6 del artículo estar (que figura con el título SEGUIDO DE UNA PREPOSICIÓN), sin necesidad de recorrer todo lo que precede. Las acepciones más usuales aparecen al comienzo del artículo.

2. Las locuciones y expresiones, siguiendo el orden alfabético, se encuentran siempre después de las diferentes acepciones y tras el signo || —. Se prescinde del guión cuando sólo existe una locución o expresión.

3. Los verbos ingleses de uso corriente, que adquieren un sentido particular al ser acompañados por ciertas partículas, figuran en negritas al final del artículo en un solo bloque precedido de un rombo negro (◆) y van separados entre sí por el signo ||. Las diferentes acepciones tienen entre ellas | y van seguidas de las locuciones o expresiones después de || — (véase to go).

4. Con objeto de orientar al lector y darle el nivel lingüístico de la palabra o expresión empleada se han distinguido dos grados de familiaridad: FAM, es decir «familiar, pero admitido», y POP, que corresponde a «popular» y «vulgar». Si estas rúbricas preceden a la traducción, se refieren a la palabra estudiada, mientras que si están a continuación se aplican al término dado como equivalente. Así el vocablo español jeta ha sido considerado familiar en la tercera acepción, al intercalarse la rúbrica FAM. En general, al escoger la traducción, se ha puesto el mismo grado de familiaridad, salvo cuando era completamente imposible.

Diferenciación de las acepciones

Cuando una palabra tiene varias acepciones, cada una de ellas va seguida de una explicación. Ésta se coloca entre paréntesis, si está redactada en la lengua de la que se traduce, y entre corchetes, si está escrita en la otra (véase descubrimiento). Se procede del mismo modo con las expresiones que tienen diversos significados (por ej. to get sick quiere decir «ponerse enfermo» en el sentido más general y «marearse» al tratarse de un malestar producido por un viaje en coche, barco o avión). Las explicaciones, que no son más que meras orientaciones y no han de considerarse nunca como sinónimos, se sustituyen frecuentemente por ejemplos. Si diferentes ejemplos o expresiones tienen una primera parte común, ésta se indica sólo una vez y las variantes están unidas por «or» o por «o» (por ej. edad de la razón or del juicio age of reason; to get o to come to the point ir al grano). En los casos en que se puede conservar u omitir una parte de la oración, ésta se pone entre paréntesis (por ej. hablando del rey de Roma por la puerta asoma talk of the devil (and he will appear)).

Observaciones

Ciertos artículos tienen al final algunas observaciones, escritas en español o en inglés según el lector a quien van dirigidas, para precisar aún más el sentido de una palabra, el uso especial de la misma, su evolución, las irregularidades del plural o verbales o cualquier otra aclaración que se juzgue útil (véase menor).

Americanismos

Se ha procurado también, dada la importancia que siempre tuvieron y la pujanza que cobran en la actualidad las naciones de lengua castellana e inglesa en el Nuevo Mundo, incluir incontables americanismos en ambas partes del diccionario. Los empleados en Hispanoamérica van precedidos de la abreviatura AMER y los utilizados en Norteamérica de las letras us.

SUMMARY OF SPANISH GRAMMAR

The Spanish alphabet

The Spanish alphabet is made up of the following 28 letters:

a	b	c	ch	d	e	f	g	h	i	j	k
a	be	ce:	che	de:	e	efe	ge	hache	i	jota	ka
l	ll	m	n	ñ	o	p	q	r	s	t
ele	elle	eme	ene	eñe	o	pe	cu	erre	ese	te u	v	x	y	z
u	uve	equis	i	griega	zeta

Note: The Spanish alphabet contains three letters which are not found in the English alphabet: ch (che), ll (elle), ñ (eñe). The letter w (uve doble or ve doble) exists in Spanish only in words of foreign origin, and is therefore not considered part of the Spanish alphabet. All Spanish letters are feminine in gender (una s mayúscula a capital «s»; la jota the «j»).

Pronunciation

The Spanish-English half of this dictionary contains no phonetic transcription of the Spanish for the simple reason that Spanish spelling is an exact reflection of the pronunciation of the language. The pronunciation of each individual letter in Spanish is subject to certain strict rules (see below), and a word is pronounced simply by adding together the sounds of the individual letters which make up the word.

Every letter is pronounced in Spanish with the exception of the inaspirate h as in hacha ['atʃa], and the u in the groups -que-, -gue-, -qui-, which is silent unless it bears a diaeresis (guerra ['gera], paragüero [para'gwero]).

Consonants

Consonants are never doubled in Spanish, except c, r, and n (acción, carro, innovación). ll is considered a letter in its own right.

1. b and v. These two letters represent the same sound in Spanish. They are less explosive than the English b.

In an initial position and after certain consonants, especially m and n, the sound is similar to that of the English b (brillo, vaca, convoy).

Elsewhere the sound is softer. It is a bilabial fricative, similar to the English v but pronounced between the upper and lower lip rather than between the lower lip and the upper teeth (ave, labor).

2. c. Before e or i it is pronounced like the th in thirst (ciudad, ceguera). In certain regions (See seseo) this c is pronounced as s. Elsewhere it is like the hard c in cat (casco, locura, acto).

Note that words like acción, reducción contain both sounds, the cc being pronounced kth [kθ].

3. ch. Like the English ch [tʃ] in church (coche, muchacho).

4. d. In an initial position and after l or n the sound is similar to that of the English d, but pronounced with the tip of the tongue touching the back of the upper front teeth (debo, conde, caldo).

Elsewhere the sound is similar to that of the th [ð] in though (arduo, cuadra, boda). This sound varies in intensity and is particularly weak in the verb ending -ado and at the end of certain words where it is often scarcely perceptible (ciudad, Madrid).

5. f. Like the English f in for (fatal, oferta).

6. g. Before e or i like the guttural ch in Scottish loch (gestión, elegir).

In an initial position or after a nasal consonant the g is like the hard English g in gate (garbo, pongo). In other positions the pronunciation is basically similar to this hard g, with the difference that the back of the tongue does not quite touch the velum, making the sound more fricative than occlusive (agua, lago, algo).

7. h. The h is mute (hombre, heno).

8. j. Like the guttural ch in Scottish loch (ojo, injerto, paja).

9. k. Pronounced as in English and found only in words of foreign origin (kilo).

10. l. Like the English l (lobo, olmo, pañol, perla).

11. ll. Somewhat similar to the lli in million or the [-lj-] sound in failure ['feiljə*], but with the two elements, l and y, pronounced so closely as to become one sound (valle, llorar, llamar). See yeísmo.

12. m. Like the English m (mármol, amar).

13. n. Pronounced as in English, but with the tip of the tongue touching the back of the upper front teeth (no, cándido, común).

Before hard c and g and before j and soft g the Spanish n tends to nasalize the preceding vowel and is itself pronounced like the n in the English words song and thank (congoja, canje).

Before a bilabial consonant (b, v) the sound of the n approaches that of the m (convivar).

14. ñ. Pronounced like the ni in onion (ñame, niño).

15. p. Slightly less explosive than the English p, but more explosive than the English b (para, comprar).

16. q. Found only in the groups -que and -qui in which the two letters q and u together have the sound of the English k (quedar [ke'ðar], quitar [ki'tar]).

17. r and rr. The Spanish r is always «rolled» or «trilled», the tip of the tongue vibrating against the hard palate.

Between two vowels or after a consonant other than l, n, s, a single r is pronounced with only one «trill».

In an initial position, and after l, n, or s, the r requires two or three «trills», as does the double r (rr) whatever its position.

Note: The rr may never be split at the end of a line in written Spanish.

18. s. Similar to the English s in soap (paso, esperar).

Note: Only words borrowed from other languages begin with s followed by a consonant in Spanish. Such words are usually pronounced as if there were an e before the s (starter [es'tarter]).

19. t. Slightly less aspirate than in English, and with the tip of the tongue against the back of the upper front teeth (tonto, contra).

20. v. See b.

21. w. Broadly speaking the w is pronounced like the v in Spanish. In certain foreign words the sound is that of the Spanish u (Waterloo, whisky).

22. x. Similar to the ks in thinks, although the k sound is very weak when this letter precedes a consonant (éxito ['eksito], exponer [expo'ner]).

23. y. As a consonant is stronger than the English y in yonder.

24. z. Pronounced like the th [θ] in think.

Note: This letter is not used before e or i, except in certain words of foreign origin and in the name of the letter itself (zeta). This implies the substitution of c for z in certain verb forms and in the plural of words ending in z (pez, peces; empezar, empecemos).

Vowels

Spanish vowels are pure sounds, the position of the mouth remaining the same throughout the pronunciation of the vowel. They are pronounced clearly even in unstressed positions, unlike English vowels, and are not subject to diphthongization (e.g. lumbago in English [lʌm'beigəu], in Spanish [lum'bago]).

1. a. An open vowel, similar to but shorter than the a in the English father. The sound is like the Northern English a in hat.

2. e. Pronounced like the first e in element.

3. i. A sound shorter than the ee in seen, and longer than the i in hit.

4. o. Similar to the o in hot.

5. u. Similar to the oo in boot.

Note: The u is mute in the groups -que, -qui (querer, equipo), and also in the groups -gue, and -gui (guerra, guitarra), unless it bears a diaeresis (agüero).

6. y. Pronounced like the Spanish i at the end of a word and when it stands alone as a conjunction. In certain Latin American countries, especially Argentina, Chile and Uruguay, this letter is pronounced like the si in decision.

Diphthongs and triphthongs

A diphthong is one syllable made up of two vowels each of which conserves its own sound. In speaking or writing Spanish one must take care never to divide a diphthong. Spanish diphthongs contain either one strong vowel (a, e, o) and one weak vowel (u, i and final y), e.g. ai, au; ei, eu; oi, ou; ia, ie, io; ua, ue, uo, or two weak vowels (iu, ui). Unless otherwise indicated by a written accent, the stress automatically falls on the strong vowel if there is one, or on the final vowel of the diphthong if both are weak (caigo, guante, ruido).

A triphthong (three vowels in the same syllable) is always formed in Spanish by a strong vowel placed between two weak vowels (iai, iei; uai, uei). The stress falls on the strong vowel (no os riáis).

Note: Two strong vowels which occur together are considered as two separate syllables and as such conform to the following rules for tonic stress. In order to put the stress on a vowel other than that on which it would naturally fall, it is necessary to mark the stressed vowel with a written accent (país).

Tonic stress and the written accent

The stress falls on the penultimate syllable if the word ends in a vowel, -n or -s (escribo, escribes, escriben).

The stress falls on the final syllable if the word ends in a consonant other than -n or -s or in y (agilidad, mantel, amor, Paraguay).

Any deviation from the above rules is indicated by means of a written accent (árbol, canción, jabalí), even if the stressed letter is a capital (África).

A written accent on the u or i in a diphthong changes the diphthong into two separate syllables (desconfío, ataúd). When an accent is needed to stress a syllable containing a diphthong or a triphthong, it must be placed over the strong vowel (averiguáis, también).

In general the stress remains on the same syllable in the plural as in the singular (estación, estaciones). It may therefore be necessary to add or remove a written accent according to the above rules. There are three exceptions (régimen, regímenes; carácter, caracteres; especímen, especímenes).

Note: The written accent is also used to distinguish between words which are spelt alike but have different grammatical functions, such as the article el and the pronoun él, the conjunction si and the adverb or the reflexive sí, the pronoun tú and the possessive adjective tu, the conjunction mas and the adverb más, the adjective solo and the adverb sólo, the demonstrative adjectives este, esta, etc. and the demonstrative pronouns éste, ésta, etc., the relative pronouns que, quien, etc. and the interrogative and exclamative pronouns qué, quién, etc., dé, 1st and 3rd person of the present subjunctive of the verb «dar», and the preposition de, sé, 1st person present indicative of «saber» and 2nd person singular of the imperative of «ser», and the reflexive pronoun se.

The first element of a compound word is written without an accent (decimosexto), unless the word is an adverb formed by an adjective and the adverbial suffix -mente (fácilmente) or two adjectives joined by a hyphen (histórico-crítico).

SPELLING RULES ESTABLISHED BY THE SPANISH ACADEMY IN 1952

Words ending in -oo have no written accent (Feijoo).
The infinitive ending in -uir has no written accent (huir).
Monosyllabic verb forms have no written accent (fue, fui, dio, vio).
Other monosyllables (ní) bear no written accent, except to avoid confusion with similar words (sí, conjunction, sí adverb).
Accents are not added to foreign names unless they have passed into the Spanish language under a hispanicized form.

Capital letters

Capitals are very seldom used in Spanish. Nouns and adjectives of nationality, the days of the week, the months, titles and names of society members or doctrine followers are always written with a small initial letter (un argentino, la bandera mexicana, martes, febrero, el duque de Rivas, los laboristas).

The article

	Definite article		Indefinite article
	Singular	Plural	Singular	Plural
Masculine	el	los	un	unos
Feminine	la	las	una	unas

The definite article

The prepositions a and de combine with the masculine singular definite article el to give al and del respectively (al chico, del hombre but a los chicos, de la(s) mujer(es)). Immediately before a feminine singular noun beginning with stressed a or ha the definite article la is replaced by el (el agua, el hambre). Descriptive adjectives take the usual feminine endings (el agua fría). The article la is used before unstressed a or ha, and also before feminine proper nouns beginning with stressed a or ha (la antítesis, la Ángela, La Haya).

The definite article is used more frequently in Spanish than in English:

- when the noun is qualified (la Andalucía oriental eastern Andalusia; la España de la posguerra postwar Spain; la Europa del siglo veinte twentieth-century Europe);
- with most names of rivers, seas and mountains;
- before titles (el rey Arturo King Arthur; el doctor Pérez Doctor Pérez; llame al teniente García call Lieutenant García; el Presidente Roosevelt President Roosevelt; el señor Hernández Mr. Hernández; la señora de Hernández Mrs. Hernández; la señora ha salido madam is out), except with don, doña, santo, santa (me lo dijo don Ramón; Santa Bárbara), in direct address (¿Ud. qué opina, doctor Pérez?; buenas tardes, señora), when the title is in apposition (el seños X, presidente del club; el presidente del club, señor X), before foreign titles such as Herr, Lord, etc.;
- with parts of the body and articles of clothing where in English the possessive adjective is frequently used (levantó la mano he raised his hand; llevaba la chaqueta en el brazo he carried his jacket over his arm). The idea of possession is often conveyed by a weak object pronoun (me lavé la cara I washed my face).

Note the use of the singular in Spanish (se pusieron la chaqueta they put on their jackets);

- in certain expressions of time (eran las cinco it was five o'clock; es la hora de cenar it is dinner time; se fue el jueves y volvió el domingo he left on Thursday and came back on Sunday; los domingos se aburría he used to get bored on Sundays; la semana que viene next week; el mes, el año, el jueves pasado last month, year, Thursday);
- with the seasons (cuando llegó el invierno when winter arrived). After en the article is not essential (en (el) invierno);
- with certain institutions (la cárcel, la ciudad, el colegio, el instituto, el mercado, la universidad);
- with nouns used generically (los profesores están mal pagados teachers are underpaid; el azúcar es dulce sugar is sweet);
- before terms of quantity (una libra la docena a pound a dozen);
- before infinitives (el comer eating);
- to express a percentage (el diez por ciento ten percent).

The names of countries are not generally preceded by the definite article. In case of doubt, however, it is advisable to omit the article with the name of a country.

- The definite article is omitted:
- before an unqualified name of a country (España, México), with the exceptions mentioned above;
 - before certain words (casa, caza, misa, palacio, paseo, pesca, presidio) when used with verbs of motion;
 - between the name and number of a ruler (Enrique cuatro).

The indefinite article

Before feminine nouns beginning with stressed a or ha the singular indefinite article una is replaced by un (un hacha, un ala, un alma, but una alumna).

The plural forms unos and unas mean some, although the English some is frequently omitted in Spanish (unos guantes preciosos some lovely gloves; compré pan también I bought some bread too).

Unos and unas also indicate approximate quantity (unos diez días about ten days; tendrá unos cuarenta años he must be about forty).

- The indefinite article, which is used less in Spanish than in English, is omitted:
- with ciento (a hundred), cierto (a certain), igual (such a), medio (half a), mil (a thousand), otro (another), semejante (such a), tal (such a), tan (such a);
 - before an unqualified noun indicating rank, occupation or nationality used after the verbs ser or parecer (era oficial de marina he was a naval officer, quiere ser doctor he wants to be a doctor). If the noun is qualified the article is used (es un doctor excelente he is an excellent doctor);
 - before most nouns in apposition (Paraguay, país que...);

— before an unqualified noun dependent on a negative (no tengo coche I haven't got a car; sin chaqueta ni corbata without a jacket or tie; no dijo palabra he did not say a word). The use of the indefinite article in such cases adds emphasis (no tiene un coche sino tres he hasn't got one car, but three; no dijo ni una palabra he did not say a single word);

— after qué (¡qué mujer más guapa! what a lovely woman!).
Note: The indefinite article is used in Spanish before an abstract noun followed by a qualifying adjective (reinaba un silencio total total silence reigned).

The English construction a shirt and tie; omitting the second article, is impossible in Spanish; the article must be repeated (una camisa y una corbata).

The neuter article lo serves to substantivize adjectives, adverbs and participles (lo interesante del caso the interesting thing; lo dicho what has been said; lo antes posible as soon as possible). It also intensifies adjectives and adverbs in the construction lo... que (por lo inteligente que es because he is so intelligent). [See lo.]

The noun

Gender

Apart from the straightforward masculine and feminine, the following genders are found in the Spanish language: ambiguo which denotes a word that can be either masculine or feminine (el mar, la mar), común which applies to nouns that change gender according to the sex of the being they represent (el joven, la joven), epiceno which applies to words having only one form and gender for both the male and the female of the species (el leopardo, la perdiz). To distinguish between the male and the female in this case one must add «macho» or «hembra» respectively (el leopardo hembra).

Masculine nouns

- Those ending in -o (except la mano, la moto, la foto, la dinamo, la radio, la nao, la seo).
- Those ending in -or (except la flor, la coliflor, la labor, la sor).
- Names of men, male animals, jobs and titles concerning men, seas, rivers, mountains, trees, metals, languages, days, months, colours, and infinitives used as nouns.

Feminine nouns

- Those ending in -a (except el día, el albacea, el mapa, el monarca, el Papa, el patriarca, el planeta, el cometa, el poeta, el tranvía, words of Greek origin ending in -ma, such as el diploma, el problema, el idioma, words ending in -ista, such as dentista, turista, which can be masculine or feminine, and word usually denoting male beings, such as el guardia, el cura).
- Those ending in -ción (la canción), -sión (la profesión), -d (la verdad, la red, la virtud), except el almud, el alud, el ardid, el ataúd, el césped, el laúd, el sud, el talmud.
- Names of female beings, jobs and titles concerning women, and the letters of the alphabet.

Formation of the feminine

- The general rules are as follows:
- for masculine nouns ending in -o, replace the -o by -a (el abuelo, la abuela; el gato, la gata);
 - for masculine nouns ending in a consonant, add -a (el director, la directora; el león, la leona);
 - for masculine nouns ending in -ante, -ente, -ote, replace the final -e by -a (el presidente, la presidenta);
 - other feminine ending are -esa (el conde, la condesa), -isa (el poeta, la poetisa), -triz (el actor, la actriz);
 - some nouns have a completely different feminine equivalent (hombre, mujer).

Formation of the plural

- The general rules are as follows:
- for words ending in an unstressed vowel or a stressed -e add -s (los niños, los cafés);
 - for words ending in a consonant, -y or a stressed vowel other than -e, add -es (las paredes, los reyes, los alelís). There are numerous exceptions in this category, such as mamás, papás, sofás, dominós. Note also that, in words ending in -z, the -z changes to -c before the ending -es (voz, voces; luz, luces);
 - for words ending in -s, which are monosyllabic or stressed on the final syllable, add -es (mes, meses; inglés, ingleses);

— words ending in -s or -x, which are not stressed on the final syllable, have the same form in the plural as in the singular (las crisis; los fénix). [See tonic stress and the written accent above.]

Diminutives and augmentatives

The use of diminutive and augmentative suffixes is widespread in Spanish. More often than not they indicate the favourable or unfavourable disposition of the user. They are added to nouns and adjectives, the same rules applying to both.

The general rules for the formation of DIMINUTIVES are as follows:

Word endings	Suffixes	Examples
-a, -o, consonant (except -n or -r)	-ito, a	casita
	-illo, a	cartelillo
	-uelo, a	mozueta
-e, -n, -r	-cito, a	nubecita
	-cillo, a	cancioncilla
	-zuelo, a	pastorzuelo
monosyllables, words containing a diphthong	-ecito, a	panecito
	-ezuelo, a	reyezuelo
monosyllables ending in a vowel	-cecito, a	piececito
	-cecillo, a
	-cezuelo, a

The forms -ito, -cito, -ecito and -cecito are by far the most common and usually suggest endearment as well as smallness. The suffixes -uelo, -zuelo, -ezuelo, -cezuelo are often used with pejorative connotations (mujerzuela).

The suffixes -ico, -ín, -ino, -iño also exist and are used to varying degrees in different regions.

AUGMENTATIVE SUFFIXES are used to a lesser extent than diminutive suffixes, and are often pejorative.

They often suggest clumsiness or coarseness.
The commonest augmentative suffix is -ón, -ona (solterón, solterona). Some others are -azo, -a; -acho, -a; -achón, -ona; -ote, -a (manaza, populacho, corpachón, librote).

Many augmentatives and diminutives derived in this way have become nouns in their own right (la silla; el sillín; el sillón).

Other suffixes worth mentioning here are -azo (cañonazo) and -ada (pedrada), which mean blow or shot, and -al, -aje, -ar, -edo, -eda which indicate a plantation or an area where a certain plant abounds, and also a place covered with or abundant in a certain thing (pedregal stony ground; ramaje branches; olivar olive grove; viñedo vineyard; arboleda copse).

The adjective

Position of adjectives

The position of adjectives in Spanish is a complicated subject, but the following outline of basic principles should prove helpful.

1. Adjectives which describe the noun, distinguishing it from others in its class, are usually placed after it (un libro rojo; una casa enorme; una pregunta indiscreta). They are called descriptive adjectives.

2. Adjectives which limit rather than describe are placed before the noun. This category includes the cardinal numbers (once jugadores), adjectives of quantity such as mucho, poco, demasiado, tanto, varios, cuanto, demonstrative and possessive adjectives (este profesor, mi lápiz), cada, demás, mero, otro, tal.

3. Ordinal numbers usually precede the noun (el primer punto the first point, though el punto primero is also possible; su último hijo his youngest son).

4. The following common adjectives frequently precede the noun: bueno, malo, nuevo, viejo, joven, pequeño, hermoso, though this is not a steadfast rule. Broadly speaking, if the adjective precedes the noun, the emphasis falls on the noun (un buen libro as opposed to una buena revista). If it follows the noun, more emphasis falls on the adjective (un libro bueno as opposed to un libro malo).

5. The meanings of certain common adjectives change according to their position before or after the noun (distintas or diferentes personas different (sundry, various, several) people, but personas distintas or diferentes different (from one another) people; varias personas several people, but personas varias various (sundry) people; un nuevo coche a new (another) car, but un coche nuevo a (brand-) new car; un pobre hombre a poor (pitiful) man, but un hombre pobre a poor (impecunious) man; un gran hombre a great (important) man, but un hombre grande a tall man).

6. Note the following possibilities when more than one adjective qualifies the same noun (un pequeño coche rojo a small, red car; sus ojos alegres y sonrientes, sus alegres y sonrientes ojos her happy, smiling eyes; la situación económica americana the American economic situation. Here the adjective americana might be said to describe the noun situación económica).

Formation of the feminine

For adjectives which end in -o in the masculine singular form, change -o to -a (cansado, cansada);

— for adjectives ending in -án, -ín, -ón, -or and those indicating nationality add -a and remove the written accent where necessary (holgazán, holgazana; cantarín, cantarina; gordinflón, gordinflona; trabajador, trabajadora; portugués, portuguesa). Note that comparatives ending in -or remain the same in the masculine and feminine (la mejor manera), as do certain adjectives of nationality such as árabe, marroquí, etíope and all those ending in -a (belga, persa, etc.);

— for adjectives ending in -ete or -ote replace the final -e by -a (regordete, regordeta; vulgarote, vulgarota);

— other adjectives have the same form in both genders (agrícola, azul, cursi, gris, verde, feliz, etc.).

Formation of the plural

The same rules apply to the formation of the plural of adjectives as to the formation of the plural of nouns. [See lo.]

Agreement of adjectives

The adjective agrees in number and gender with the noun or pronoun it modifies (dos muchachas encantadoras).

When it precedes more than one noun the adjective agrees with the first of them (en sosegada paz y reposo).

When the adjective follows the nouns the following five rules apply:

1. If the nouns are all singular or all plural and of the same gender, the adjective takes the plural form and agrees in gender with the nouns (historia y geografía colombianas).
2. If the nouns differ in gender but are all in the singular, the adjective either agrees in number and gender with the last of the nouns (el hombre y la mujer española) or takes the masculine plural form (el hombre y la mujer españoles), which is the better solution.
3. If the nouns are all plural but different in gender, the adjective may agree with the last noun, though it is preferable to use the masculine plural form of the adjective (bailes y canciones americanas or bailes y canciones americanos).
4. If the nouns differ in number and gender, the adjective takes the masculine plural form (la ciudad y los suburbios adormecidos).
5. If the noun is singular when taken with each adjective separately, the adjective takes the singular form (los ministros español y argentino).

Comparatives

A comparison of equality is expressed by tan (with adjectives) or tanto (with nouns)... como (ella es tan alta como yo she is as tall as I; tenías tanto tiempo como yo you had as much time as I; tiene tantos hermanos como tú he has as many brothers as you).

A comparison of inequality is expressed by más... que and menos... que (ella es más simpática que su hermana she is more friendly (or friendlier) than her sister; es menos inteligente que tú he is not so intelligent as you; menos exigente que less demanding than).

Note: More than and less than before a number or an expression of quantity are translated by más de and menos de (tengo más que tú but tengo más de cien).

More than and less than are translated by más and menos de lo que (or de los que, etc.) when the second member of the comparison is a clause (tienen más empleados de los que necesitan; era más fácil de lo que pensaba).

For irregular comparatives see below.

Superlatives

The absolute superlative is formed by placing muy before the adjective or adding the suffix -ísimo to the adjective (alto, muy alto, altísimo). The latter method is more difficult to use since not all adjectives can take the suffix -ísimo, e.g. arduo. Muy should not however be used with mucho, the superlative of which is muchísimo. The suffix -ísimo also makes certain spelling changes necessary: adjectives ending in -co take the suffix -quísimo (rico, riquísimo), those ending in -go take the suffix -guísimo (largo, larguísimo), those ending in -n or -z take the suffix -císimo (joven, jovencísimo), those containing a diphthong usually lose it in the superlative (valiente, valentísimo), although in many cases both forms are possible (bueno, buenísimo, bonísimo; fuerte, fuertísimo, fortísimo), adjectives ending in -io change this ending to -ísimo (limpio, limpísimo), but -io becomes -iísimo (pío, piísimo), adjectives ending in -ble take -bilísimo (agradable, agradabilísimo), those ending in -bre, -cre, -ero, take -érrimo (célebre, celebérrimo; acre, acérrimo; áspero, aspérrimo), pobre and pulcro have two superlative forms, one regular (*pobrísim*o, *pulcrísim*o), the other of Latin origin (pau-pérrimo, pulquérrimo).

The relative superlative is formed as follows: la más simpática de las mujeres; la mujer más simpática que conozco.

Irregular comparatives and superlatives

Positive	Comparative	Superlative
bueno	mejor	óptimo
malo	peor	pésimo
grande	mayor	máximo
pequeño	menor	mínimo
alto	superior	supremo
bajo	inferior	ínfimo

Note: that más grande, más pequeño, más alto and más bajo and the regular superlatives buenísimo, malísimo, grandísimo, pequeñísimo, altísimo and bajísimo also exist (es más grande que el otro or es mayor que el otro).

Cardinal numbers

They are invariable except uno, the multiples of ciento, ciento and mil in certain cases, millón and its multiples. Numbers 16 to 19 and 21 to 29 inclusive may be written as one word or three (diecinueve, diez y nueve; veintitrés, veinte y tres). They are usually written as one word with an accent where necessary to conserve the stress (veintidós).

The conjunction y is only placed between the tens and the units (mil treinta y dos one thousand and thirty-two).

Uno changes to una before a feminine singular noun (una mujer), and to un before a masculine singular noun (un hombre).

Ciento changes to cien before a common noun or a number it multiplies (cien mujeres, cien millones de habitantes, cien mil hombres). It is never preceded by the indefinite article. Multiples of a hundred are written as one word and agree in number and gender with the noun they multiply (doscientos hombres, doscientas mil mujeres, quinientas treinta y ocho páginas). Cientos de may be used to mean «hundreds of».

Millón is a masculine noun (un millón de pesetas, dos millones de pesetas, cuatrocientos veintiún millones de pesetas).

Mil is used without the article (cuarenta mil kilómetros). It has a plural form when used to mean «thousands of» (miles de víctimas thousands of victims; miles y miles de thousands and thousands of).

For numbers eleven hundred and above Spanish uses the formula mil cien or mil ciento, mil doscientos, etc. (en el año mil setecientos in (the year) seventeen hundred).

Ordinal numbers

They agree with the noun they qualify (las primeras personas).

Primero and tercero become primer and tercer in the cases described under the heading APOCOPATION (below).

In everyday Spanish the ordinal numbers are used from one to nine inclusive (Felipe Segundo). From ten to twelve inclusive the cardinal or the ordinal is used (la fila duodécima or la fila doce), and for thirteen and above the cardinal number is used (el siglo veinte). There are two forms of the ordinal ninth in Spanish, noveno and nono. The latter is generally used only with the name of the Pope Pío IX (nono).

There are several ways of conveying the idea of approximate quantity in Spanish. The most common uses the plural indefinite article unos, unas (unas treinta personas about thirty people; unos sesenta kilos some sixty kilos). The suffix -ena may be used in do-cena, quincena and with numbers which are multiples of ten, such as veintena, cuarentena, etc. (compré una docena de huevos, debe de tener una treintena de diccionarios).

Indefinite adjectives

The main ones are alguno, ninguno, cierto, varios, cualquiera, poco, bastante, mucho, demasiado, demás, cuanto, todo, cada, tal, otro, uno, tanto. They are variable in gender except for bastante, cualquiera, cada, demás and tal, and variable in number except for cada, demás and varios.

The interrogative adjective

Qué is an invariable interrogative adjective (¿qué día es? what day is it?; ¿qué chaqueta te vas a poner? which jacket are you going to wear?).

Cuánto varies in number and gender according to the noun it accompanies (¿cuántas personas vinieron? how many people came?; ¿cuánto tiempo nos queda? how much time do we have left?).

The above adjectives are used in direct and indirect questions (no sabía qué decir he did not know what to say). They are also used exclamatively (¡qué calor! isn't it hot!; ¡cuánta gente! what a lot of people!).

Apocopation

Apocopation is the dropping of the final vowel or syllable of a word. The following words lose their final -o before a masculine singular noun: uno, veintiuno, alguno, ninguno, primero, tercero, pos-trero, bueno and malo (un buen hombre, de ningún modo, el primer alumno, el tercer libro, ayer hizo mal tiempo, etc.). In the case of vein-tiuno, alguno, ninguno a written accent is added to the apocopated form (veintiún, etc.).

Santo becomes san before the name of a canonized saint (San Miguel), except before Tomás, Tomé, Toribio and Domingo (Santo Tomás, Santo Tomé, Santo Toribio, Santo Domingo).

Ciento becomes cien before a common noun or a number which it multiplies (cien dólares, cien mil casas).

Grande becomes gran before a masculine singular noun beginning with a consonant (un gran ruido). This apocopation is optional before a feminine noun or a masculine noun beginning with a vowel (una gran mujer, un gran automóvil).

There are other cases of apocopation. The adverbs tanto and cuanto become tan and cuan before an adjective or another adverb (cuan largo, tan pronto ríe como llora).

Recientemente becomes recién before a past participle (recién llegado). Cualquiera loses its final -a before a masculine singular noun (cualquier hombre); this apocopation is also possible before a feminine singular noun (me parece que cualquier mujer es capaz de hacerlo).

They agree in number and gender with the thing or things possessed and not with the possessor.

The adjectives mi, tu, su are always placed before the noun they modify (mi casa). Mío, tuyo, suyo, however, follow the noun (la casa mía). Ambiguity may arise from the use of the adjective su, which means «your», «his», «her», «its», «their», and of the pronoun suyo. This ambiguity may be avoided by replacing them by el ... de ella, etc. (el coche de ellos their car), or by adding de usted, de ella, etc. (su libro de usted your book).

The possessive is used to a lesser extent in Spanish than in English and is often replaced by the article. In such a case the idea of possession is often conveyed by a verb in the reflexive form (se quitó el abrigo he took off his coat) or by the indirect object pronoun (me vendaron la herida they bandaged my wound).

Demonstrative adjectives and pronouns

Degree of remoteness (adverbs of place)		Masculine and feminine		Neuter
		Singular	Plural	Singular
aquí here	adj	este, esta this	estos, estas these pron	éste, ésta this (one)	éstos, éstas these (ones)	esto this ahí there	adj	ese, esa that	esos, esas those pron	ése, ésa that (one)	ésos, ésas those (ones)	eso that allí, allá there	adj	aquel, aquella that	aquellos, aquellas those
	pron	aqué!, aquélla that (one)	aquéllos, aquéllas those (ones)	aquello that

The written accent on the demonstrative pronoun distinguishes it from the demonstrative adjective. Since there are no neuter demonstrative adjectives in Spanish, the neuter demonstrative pronouns bear no written accent.

The three forms este, ese and aquel correspond to different degrees of remoteness in time and space.

Este is the least remote and denotes the same degree of closeness as this in English. Aquel indicates the greatest degree of remoteness (aquella mañana hacía mucho frío it was very cold that morning). Ese describes an intermediate or an undetermined degree of remoteness (esa tienda está lejos de casa that shop is a long way from home). Ese can also have pejorative overtones (no me gusta nada que salgas con esa gente I don't like you going around with the likes of them). When the demonstrative pronouns refer to nouns mentioned in immediately preceding clauses, éste, etc. usually means «the latter» and aqué!, etc. «the former». Demonstrative pronouns are often replaced by el de, la de, los de, las de (that of, those of, the one of, the one with, those with, the one in, those in) or by el que, la que, los que, las que (the one that, those that, the one which, those which, the one who, those who).

Pronouns

Personal pronouns

Spanish subject pronouns are usually omitted unless a certain emphasis is required (no vamos we're not going; nosotros no vamos we aren't going). The subject pronoun is normally omitted when it is implicit in the verb ending (canto I sing). It is sometimes necessary to include the pronoun to avoid ambiguity (cuando él llegó yo cantaba).

The subject pronoun is used in the second half of a comparison (la conoces mejor que yo you know her better than I) and immediately after según, salvo, excepto and sometimes entre (según él according to him).

In certain regions of Spain and Latin America there are variations in the usage of the object pronoun la, le and lo: laísmo is the use of la and las instead of le and les as the feminine indirect object pronouns; leísmo is the use of le and never lo as the masculine singular direct object pronoun; loísmo is the use of lo instead of le as the masculine singular direct and indirect object pronoun. These variations are frowned upon by the Spanish Academy, which recommends the use of lo as the masculine direct object pronoun (lo veo I see him), and le as the indirect object pronoun (le dije I told him). Literary style tends to prefer le when reference is made to a person, reserving lo for objects.

The object pronoun always precedes the verb (te hablo I am speaking to you), except when the verb is in the infinitive, the gerund or the imperative, in which case the pronoun is enclitic (mirarle, mirándole, mírale).

This enclitic use of the pronoun is also found in literary style when a verb in the indicative or the conditional is initial in a main or independent clause (diríale la verdad si la ocasión se me presentase I should tell him the truth were the opportunity to arise; mirábanle con admiración they contemplated him in admiration). When there are two pronouns, the indirect object pronoun is placed before the direct object pronoun (me lo dio he gave it to me; dámelo give it to me). When both pronouns are in the third person le or les (to him, to her, to them) are replaced by se (se lo diré I shall tell him; dáselo give it to him).

Usted (Ud. or Vd.) and ustedes (Uds. or Vds.) are the polite forms of address used with strangers and people to whom one owes a certain amount of respect (as opposed to the familiar forms of address tú and vosotros). Personal and possessive pronouns and adjectives related to usted and ustedes respectively assume the form of the third person singular and the third person plural (si usted me lo pide, le llevaré a su casa if you wish, I shall take you home).

Vos is used instead of usted in poetic or oratorial style, in addressing God or an eminent person. (See vos.)

The reflexive pronoun is used when the action of a verb refers back to the subject (nos levantamos tarde we got up late). The position of reflexive pronouns is the same as that of object pronouns. With nos and os in the first and second person plural of the imperative the verb loses its final -s and -d respectively before the pronouns (sentémonos, sentaos).

Himself, herself, itself, themselves preceded by a preposition are translated by sí when they refer back to the subject of the verb (esa mujer siempre habla de sí that woman is always talking about herself). If the preposition is con it joins with mí, ti, sí to form conmigo, contigo, consigo.

Relative pronouns

The relative pronoun must never be omitted in Spanish (el perro que vimos the dog (which) we saw).

Within its own clause the relative pronoun may be a) the subject, b) the direct object, c) the prepositional object. Its antecedent (the part of the main clause to which it refers) may be a) a person, b) a thing, c) a clause or verb (la chica que llamó dejó su número; el coche que conducía era nuevo; no pudo contestar, de lo cual deduje que...).

Que, the most common relative pronoun, can be a subject or a direct object pronoun when the antecedent is a person or a thing (el amigo que me presentó, el coche que pasó).

Subject	Objects
	No preposition		After preposition	Reflexive
	Direct	Indirect
yo (I)		me (me, to me, etc.)	mí (me)	me (myself)
tú (you)		te (you, to you, etc.)	ti (you)	te (yourself)
él (he)	le, lo (him)	le (to him, etc.)	él (him)	se (himself)
ella (she)	la (her)	le (to her, etc.)	ella (her)	se (herself)
ello (neuter: it)	lo (it)	le (to it, etc.)	ello (it)	se (itself)
nosotros, as (we)		nos (us, to us, etc.)	nosotros, as (us)	nos (ourselves)
vosotros, tras (you)		os (you, to you, etc.)	vosotros, as (you)	os (yourselves)
ellos (they)	los (them)	les (to them, etc.)	ellos (them)	se (themselves)
ellas (they)	las (them)	les (to them, etc.)	ellas (them)	se (themselves)

Quien (pl quienes) is used only for persons and agrees in number with its antecedent. It can be the subject, the direct object or the prepositional object in its clause (fue él quien lo dijo it was he who said it; las mujeres a quienes miraba the women (whom) he was watching). Used without an antecedent quien means «he who», «anyone who», «whoever», etc. (quien no estudia no aprende he who does not study learns nothing). It can also mean «someone who» (necesita quien le proteja she needs someone to protect her; no hubo quien me ayudase there was no one who would help me).

El que (la, los, las que) and el cual (la cual, los, las cuales) sometimes replace que and quien as the subject pronoun, when the antecedent is a person and the relative clause gives added information about the subject (encontré a sus hermanas, las cuales iban al colegio). They may also be used as direct object pronouns in the same kind of clause if the antecedent is a person (ésta es la muchacha a la que mandaron this is the girl they sent), and as prepositional object pronouns applying to persons or things (el hijo para el que lo compré the child for whom I bought it; la sala por la cual pasamos the room we passed through). Lo que and lo cual are used when the antecedent is a verb or clause (lo que más me molesta es el calor what bothers me most is the heat; no veo lo que haces I cannot see what you are doing; llegó tarde, lo cual (or lo que) era de esperar he was late, which was to be expected; nos despedimos de él, con lo cual (or lo que) subió al tren we said good-bye to him, whereupon he boarded the train). Note that lo cual may only be used to refer back to something already mentioned.

Cuyo (whose, of whom, of which) agrees in number and gender with the object possessed (la casa cuyo tejado es rojo the house with the red roof (the roof of which is red); el chico cuyas gafas se rompieron the boy whose glasses broke).

Interrogative pronouns

These differ from the relative pronouns only in that they bear a written accent, both in direct and indirect questions. They are: qué (what), quién (who, whom), and cuál (which, which one).

Qué is invariable in number and gender; quién and cuál add -es in the plural without loss of the written accent (¿qué ocurre? what's happening?; ¿quién fue? who was it?; no sé quien habrá sido I don't know who it could have been; ¿a cuáles te refieres? to which are you referring?).

Note that in Spanish a question is always introduced by an inverted question mark.

Indefinite pronouns

These are alguien (someone), nadie (no one), quienquiera and cualquiera (anyone), which become quienesquiera and cualesquiera in the plural, uno (one), alguno (someone, some), ninguno (no one, none), se (one), algo (something), nada (nothing).

Cualquiera, uno, alguno and ninguno do not apocope when used as pronouns.

Remember that all the indefinite adjectives may also be used as pronouns.

The adverb

Adverbs of manner are formed by adding the suffix -mente to the feminine singular form of the adjective (blando, blandamente; fácil, fácilmente). Note that if an adjective carries a written accent the corresponding adverb bears the same accent. When several adverbs appear consecutively the suffix -mente is added only to the last one, the others taking the form of the feminine singular adjective (lentea y perezosamente slowly and lazily).

Adverbs of quantity may be simple words such as más (more), menos (less), bastante (enough), demasiado (too much), poco (little), mucho (a lot), tanto (so much), cuanto (as much), or adverbial phrases such as poco más o menos (about), al menos (at least), etc. These words are invariable when used as adverbs.

Common adverbs of place are abajo, acá, adelante, adentro, ahí, alrededor, allá, allí, aquí, arriba, atrás, cerca, debajo, delante, dentro, detrás, donde, dondequiera, encima, enfrente, fuera, lejos, etc.

Adverbs of time include ahora, anoche, antaño, antes, aún, ayer, ¿cuándo?, después, entonces, hoy, jamás, luego, mañana, nunca, pronto, siempre, tarde, temprano, todavía, ya, etc.

In the compound tenses in Spanish the adverb must not be placed between the auxiliary and the main verb (siempre lo hemos hecho así we have always done it that way), unless the auxiliary is ser.

The main adverbs of negation are ni, no, no ... más, no ... más que, no ... sino, ya no. No on its own translates the English no (¿lo harás? — no will you do it? — no). Before a verb it is equivalent to not in English (no vinieron they did not come).

If the negatives nunca, jamás, nada, nadie, ninguno, tampoco, and expressions such as en mi vida, en mis días, etc. precede the verb, the word no is omitted (nunca lo haré I shall never do it). If they follow the verb, no must be used (no lo haré nunca I shall never do it).

The comparative of adverbs is formed with tan, más or menos (tan despacio como puedas as slowly as you can; más rápido que yo faster than I). Four adverbs are compared irregularly: bien (mejor), mal (peor), mucho (más), poco (menos).

The superlative of adverbs may be formed with the neuter article lo followed by a word or phrase expressing possibility (lo más pronto posible as soon as possible).

The verb

Classification

The different types of verb are:

— transitive, which have a direct object (comía cerezas I was eating cherries);

— intransitive, which have an indirect object or none at all (voy al cine I am going to the pictures; comía I was eating);

— reflexive, when the subject and the object of the action are the same person. This verb form uses the reflexive pronouns me, te, se, nos, os, se, which are usually placed before the verb (el niño se lavó the child washed (himself); el niño se durmió the child fell asleep). These pronouns are, however, enclitic in the infinitive (dormirse), the imperative (duérmete) and the gerund (durmiéndose). Compound tenses are formed with the auxiliary haber, and the past participle remains invariable (tu madre se ha dormido your mother has fallen asleep). Reciprocity is also expressed in Spanish by the reflexive (no se conocían antes they did not know each other before, they did not know one another before);

— impersonal, when they are used only in the third person singular with an indeterminate subject (llueve it is raining). Note that the pronoun it is not translated into Spanish. In expressions such as es tarde (it is late), es de noche (it is dark), es de desear (it is desirable), the verb ser is impersonal and invariable in number. In telling the time, however, ser agrees in number with the hour (es la una it is one o'clock; son las dos it is two o'clock). Haber is used impersonally to mean «there is», «there are», etc. (hay sitio para cien coches there is room for a hundred cars; había cien coches there were a hundred cars). When used with que and an infinitive it denotes obligation or necessity (hay que comer it is necessary to eat). Hacer is used impersonally to describe certain weather conditions (hace frío, calor it is cold, hot) and to indicate the lapse of time (hace un mes que ocurrió it happened a month ago; hace un mes que no lo veo I have not seen him for a month; está en Madrid desde hace una semana he has been in Madrid for a week);

— defective, which do not exist in all the normal tenses and persons (like the English verb must, which has no past tense, no conditional, etc.). Such verbs in Spanish are abolir, atañer, concernir, soler, etc.;

— auxiliary, when they are used to conjugate certain tenses of other verbs (see AUXILIARY VERBS below).

Note that a transitive verb in Spanish is not necessarily translated by a transitive English verb (la bala traspasó la pared the bullet went right through the wall). Spanish reflexive verbs are often intransitive verbs in English (vestirse to dress, to get dressed).

Verbs do not necessarily govern the same preposition in the two languages (depender de to depend on). Such differences are indicated in the corresponding entries in the body of the dictionary.

Personal A

An important feature of Spanish syntax is the use of the preposition a before a direct object (noun or pronoun) representing a person or a personified object or being (no conozco a su padre I do not know his father; mató al toro he killed the bull; esperar a la muerte to await death).

The a is placed before the direct object of a verb which usually has a person for its object (amar a su país to love one's country; temer a la oscuridad to be afraid of the dark).

Note that, when a verb has a direct object and an indirect object, both of which are persons, the a is usually omitted before the direct object (dejó su hijo a su madre she left her son with her mother).

The preposition a avoids possible confusion of the subject with the object (ayer encontró Pedro a mi padre Peter met my father yesterday), and also of the direct object with the complement (nombraron director a mi padre they made my father director). It also clarifies the order of succession or of superiority one wishes to express (el adjetivo posesivo precede al sustantivo the possessive adjective precedes the noun; a la tempestad siguió la calma calm followed the storm; al padre le supera en mucho el hijo the son is far superior to the father).

The presence or absence of a causes certain verbs to change their meaning (querer to want; querer a to love).

Voices, moods and tenses

The Passive Voice

The passive voice is conjugated with the auxiliary verb ser and the past participle of the verb which agrees in number and gender with the subject (las alumnas fueron expulsadas the pupils were expelled). The agent is introduced by por (fueron expulsadas por el director they were expelled by the headmaster).

Use of the passive is far more common in English than in Spanish. When the agent is expressed it is often preferable to use an active construction in Spanish (las expulsó el director). Where no agent is expressed the most common way to avoid the passive in Spanish is to use the reflexive form of the verb (se comen crudos they are eaten raw) or a verb in the third person plural (los venden en el mercado they are sold or they sell them in the market).

The Infinitive

Use of the infinitive differs considerably in English and Spanish (me permitió salir he allowed me to or he let me go out; se puso a cantar he started singing or to sing; insiste en venir he insists on coming; siento no haberle visto I am sorry I didn't see him; ¿has oído hablar de? have you heard of?).

A must precede the infinitive used after verbs of motion (fueron a trabajar they went to work), of exhorting (animar a), inviting (convitar a), forcing (obligar a), impelling (mover a), beginning (empezar a), deciding and refusing in their reflexive forms (decidirse a, negarse a).

Al followed by an infinitive expresses simultaneity (al llegar vino a verme when he arrived or on arriving he came to see me); con followed by an infinitive expresses manner or concession (con hacer un esfuerzo lo conseguirás if you make an effort you will succeed; con ser tan tonto es el que más éxito ha tenido despite his stupidity he is the one who has been most successful); de followed by an infinitive expresses condition (de haberlo pensado lo hubiera hecho if I had thought about it I should have done it); por followed by an infinitive expresses cause (no le dejaron entrar por ir mal vestido they did not let him in because he was unsuitably dressed); sin followed by an infinitive gives a negative idea (me quedé sin comer I didn't eat; está sin resolver it is unsolved); quedar por or estar por hacer, terminar, etc., mean «to remain to be done, finished, etc.».

Most Spanish infinitives can be used as nouns (en un abrir y cerrar de ojos in the twinkling of an eye, in a wink). If they play the role of subject in the sentence they may usually be translated by the English gerund (el andar es muy saludable walking is very healthy).

When the infinitive used thus is preceded by a word other than the definite article it often means «the way of doing something» (su andar gracioso her graceful gait or walk).

The infinitive can also be the object of a preposition (le escribiré antes de venir I shall write to you before I come or before coming).

In spoken Spanish a followed by the infinitive is often used as a command or an exhortation (¡a trabajar! (get or let's get) to work!).

The Gerund

The Spanish gerund is formed by adding -ando or -iendo to the stem of the verb and is invariable.

Used without a preposition it indicates manner (le esperaba leyendo he read as he waited for him; fui corriendo I ran), duration and cause (estando con él no tenía miedo when (or because) I was with him I was not afraid).

En followed by the gerund indicates an action immediately prior to that of the main verb (en llegando se lo diré I'll tell him as soon as I arrive).

Estar with the gerund gives the idea of action in progress (está leyendo he is reading) and will be dealt with below (see The Progressive Tenses below). Ir with the gerund indicates progression (iba creciendo it grew and grew). Seguir with the gerund indicates continued action (sigue trabajando he is still working).

Llevar with the gerund gives the idea of an action which started at some time in the past and continues at the moment under consideration (lleva (llevaba) tres horas esperando he has (he had) been waiting for three hours).

The Spanish gerund may not refer to the object of a verb, unlike the English present participle (vi a un muchacho que corría (not corriendo) I saw a boy running). When the English -ing has an adjectival function it is usually translated into Spanish by an adjective or an adjectival phrase (a flickering light una luz vacilante or que vacilaba).

The -ing form in English is often translated by the Spanish infinitive when it follows a preposition or when it has the function of a noun (after meeting him después de haberle encontrado; upon meeting him al encontrarle; by trying con intentarlo; walking is very healthy el andar es muy saludable; the singing of the birds el cantar de los pájaros).

The Progressive Tenses

The Spanish progressive tenses, which correspond to the English to be ...-ing, are formed with the appropriate tense of estar and the gerund of the verb in question (está leyendo). The progressive tenses convey an idea of the continuity of an action taking place at any given moment. This idea is also conveyed in Spanish by the simple present tense and the imperfect (¿adónde vas? where are you going?; caminaba lentamente he was walking slowly). Consequently, the progressive tenses are less frequently used in Spanish than in English, and when used tend to emphasize the idea that the action is in the process of being performed at the moment under consideration (estaba leyendo cuando llegue she was (in the act of) reading when I arrived). In some cases the progressive tense would never be used, namely when there is no real stress on the continuity of the action (llevaba un vestido rojo), and with verbs of motion (vamos al colegio we are going to school).

In certain cases the two forms are more or less interchangeable (está lloviendo or llueve). In other cases each form would convey a slightly different emphasis (cuando la encontraron cantaba en un bar when they found her she was singing (she was a singer) in a bar or when they found her she was (in the act of) singing in a bar; cuando la encontraron estaba cantando en un bar when they found her she was (in the act of) singing in a bar).

The preterite of estar with the gerund conveys an idea which is more difficult to express in English — that of continuing action during a limited time in the past (estuvieron hablando durante dos horas they talked for two (whole) hours, they spent two hours talking).

The Indicative

The present tense in Spanish corresponds to the simple present (dice he says), the progressive tense (llueve it is raining) and the form with do (no voy a menudo, pero cuando voy... I don't go very often, but when I do (go)...).

It is used when asking for instructions (¿dónde pongo este libro? where shall I put this book?), to describe an action beginning in the past and continuing to the present (llevo aquí un mes, hace un mes que estoy aquí I have been here for a month), and also with the expressions por poco and casi (por poco me caigo I almost fell).

The Spanish imperfect and preterite both correspond to the English preterite, but they are not interchangeable. The imperfect describes an action that was going on at some time in the past or when something else happened (almorzaba or estaba almorzando cuando llegaron I was having lunch when they arrived) or a customary state or action in the past (en aquel entonces era muy caro it was very expensive in those days; antes leía mucho pero ya no I used to read a lot, but I don't any more). It is also used in telling the time in the past (eran las ocho de la mañana it was 8 a.m.).

The preterite stresses the momentariness or the completeness of an action at a definite time in the past (llovió aquel día it rained that day; a pesar de los esfuerzos que hizo no pudo abrir la puerta despite all his efforts he did not manage to open the door).

The future is used to describe future action (iré mañana I shall go tomorrow), and also to express probability or supposition (see Conjecture and Doubt below). The idea of willingness sometimes present in the English future tense with will must be conveyed in Spanish by the present tense of the verb querer.

The Subjunctive

This mood is used to present things as possible or doubtful in subordinate and independent clauses. In the first case, the subject in the main clause must be different from the subject of the verb in the subordinate clause (no quiero que vayas I don't want you to go). It is compulsory in a subordinate clause dependent on:

— verbs or other words expressing desire (quiero que lo hagas I want you to do it), request (me pidió que lo hiciese he asked me to do it), command (me ha mandado que la mate he has ordered me to kill her), permission (no permitieron que saliera they did not allow him to go out), prohibition (les prohibieron que se viesen they were forbidden from seeing each other), advice (te aconsejo que llegues temprano I advise you to arrive early), causation (esto hizo que se perdiesen this made them lose their way), necessity (see Obligation below), emotions, such as regret, fear our surprise (siento que no le hayamos podido ayudar I am sorry we were unable to help you; es extraño que no haya llamado it is strange that he has not called), uncertainty or negation (parece dudoso que vaya it seems unlikely that he will go; negó que estuviera casado he denied that he was married), preference (prefiero que tomes la decisión I would rather that you took the decision) and evaluation (es inútil que grites it is no good your shouting);

— impersonal expressions of probability (puede ser que lo consigas you might succeed);

— conjunctions which introduce future or hypothetical action (cuando termines llámame call me when you finish; por mucho que insistas no iré I shall not go, however much you insist), including antes (de) que (before), para que (in order that), con tal que (provided that), a no ser que (unless), no porque (not because), como si (as if), etc.;

— a relative pronoun with a negative or indefinite antecedent (no hay excusa que valga no excuses; haré lo que pueda I shall do my best). In the latter case the statement expresses hypothesis because of the future tense;

— conditional clauses (¿dónde estaría ahora si no te hubiera conocido? where should I be now had I never met you?; si tuviera bastante dinero me compraría una casa if I had enough money I should buy a house).

Note: The imperfect of the subjunctive has two endings, -ra and -se; the former sometimes replaces the conditional (hubiera instead of habría, quisiera instead of querría).

There is strict correspondence between the tense of the subjunctive used in the subordinate clause and that of the main verb. The present or perfect subjunctive are used after a verb in the present, future or future perfect (es inútil que llores; es extraño que no haya llamado). The imperfect or pluperfect subjunctive are used when the main verb is in the imperfect, pretense, conditional, pluperfect or conditional perfect (habría sido inútil que gritaras; era inútil que gritaras; fue extraño que no viniese).

The Imperative

The true imperative is restricted in Spanish to the singular and plural of the second person in affirmative commands (canta, bebed). The present subjunctive must be used for the other persons in the affirmative (cantemos, suban) as well as for all persons in the negative (no cantes, no mintamos).

Object pronouns are enclitic in the affirmative (cántamelo, subámonoslo). The first and the second person plural of reflexive verbs drop respectively the final -s and -d before enclitic nos and os (levantémonos; sentaos). Vamos a followed by an infinitive is another common command form; it is translated by «let us» (vamos a ver let's see).

The Participle

There are two kinds of participle, past and present.

The past participle obeys the following rules of agreement:

— used without an auxiliary it agrees with the noun in the same way as any adjective (las casas edificadas the houses built);

— used with the auxiliary «haber» it never agrees with the noun (las he visto), and the auxiliary and the past participle must not be separated by anything other than an object pronoun (ha terminado ya he has already finished; but habiéndolo hecho having done it);

— used with the auxiliary «ser» and the semi-auxiliaries (andar, encontrarse, estar, hallarse, ir, llevar, quedar, resultar, tener, venir, etc.), it agrees with the noun in number and gender (fueron tomados por asesinos they were taken for murderers; iban muy bien vestidos they were very well dressed; cuando las tenga hechas when you have done them).

The past participle is also used in constructions analogous to the Latin ablative absolute (acabado el trabajo, saldremos when the work is finished we shall go out). In this case it always precedes the noun and agrees with it in number and gender.

Certain verbs have an irregular past participle, such as abrir (abierto), cubrir (cubierto), decir (dicho), escribir (escrito), hacer (hecho), imprimir (impreso), morir (muerto), poner (puesto), resolver (resuelto), romper (roto), ver (visto), volver (vuelto) and their derivatives, such as descubrir (descubierto), entreabrir (entreabierto), etc. Others have two past participles, one regular, the other irregular: concluir (concluido, concluso), despertar (despertado, despierto), elegir (elegido, electo), eximir (eximido, exento), soltar (soltado, suelto), sujetar (sujetado, sujeto), etc. Most of these irregular past participles have become simple adjectives. The main exceptions are frito, impreso, preso, provisito and roto, which have either replaced the regular forms or developed a meaning different from their roto has replaced rompido; prender gives prendido, which means «fastened», and preso which means «taken prisoner».

The present participle is formed with the suffixes -ante, -ente, -iente.

It exists for a very limited number of verbs and has become an adjective (referente) or a noun (amante). In its verbal function it has been replaced by the gerund (see The Progressive Tenses above).

Conjecture and Doubt

The Spanish future indicative can be used to express conjecture in the present (tendrá unos cuarenta años he must be about forty years old). Conjecture in the past is expressed by the conditional (tendría unos cuarenta años he must have been about forty). The same idea can be conveyed by deber de with an infinitive (debe or debía de tener cuarenta años). For the use of the subjunctive in expressions of uncertainty (see The Subjunctive above).

Obligation

General obligation is expressed by hay que with the infinitive (hay que trabajar para vivir one must work to live) or by the phrases es preciso, es necesario, es menester and hace falta also followed by the infinitive (es preciso trabajar, hace falta trabajar).

Personal obligation is expressed by tener que with the infinitive (tengo que verte I must see you; tuve que disculparme I had to apologize) or by es preciso que, es menester que, es necesario que and hace falta que followed by the subjunctive (es preciso que cooperemos todos we must all cooperate).

Auxiliary verbs

Haber. This auxiliary is used to form the compound tenses of all Spanish verbs, transitive, intransitive and reflexive (he comido una manzana I have eaten an apple; hemos ido a España we have been to Spain; se habían caído they had fallen). The past participle remains invariable.

Note: Haber is also an impersonal verb (hay there is, there are; había there was, there were; hubo there was, there were).

Ser. Like the English to be, ser is used to form the passive voice in Spanish (es apreciada por todos she is appreciated by all). The past participle used with the auxiliary ser agrees in number and gender with the subject.

Note: Ser is also an intransitive verb which, like the English to be, introduces a definition or a description of the subject.

There are other verbs in Spanish which occasionally serve as auxiliaries: estar, tener, andar, encontrarse, hallarse, ir, llevar, quedar, resultar, venir, etc.

Ser and estar. For information about the correct use of these verbs consult the English-Spanish half of the dictionary under BE.

The three different groups of verbs in Spanish can be distinguished by the last two letters of the infinitive.
The first group includes verbs ending in -ar in the infinitive (amar).
The second group includes verbs ending in -er in the infinitive (temer).
The third group includes verbs ending in -ir in the infinitive (partir).
The only differences between groups two and three lie in the infinitive, the first and second person plural of the present indicative (tememos, teméis; partimos, partís) and the imperative second person plural (temed; partid).
The future and conditional are formed by adding the appropriate endings to the infinitive (amar é; amar ía), and the imperfect subjunctive and the future subjunctive by replacing the third person plural preterite ending -ron with the appropriate subjunctive endings (ama ra; ama se; ama re).

Spelling changes in certain verbs

Spanish rules for spelling and pronunciation (see above) give rise to the following irregularities in the spelling of certain verbs.

Verbs in -eír, -chir, -llir, -ñer, -ñir

Infinitive	Gerund	Preterite	Imperfect subjunctive	Future subjunctive
-eír	desleír	desliendo	deslió..., deslieron	desliera..., desliese...
-chir	henchir	hinchendo	hinchó..., hinchieron	hinchera..., hinchese...
-llir	engullir	engullendo	engulló..., engulleron	engullera..., engullese...
-ñer	atañer	atañendo	atañó..., atañeron	atañera..., atañese...
-ñir	astriñir	astriñendo	astriñó..., astriñeron	astriñera..., astriñese...

The unstressed «i» in the verbs disappears between ch, ll, ñ and a vowel, i.e. in the gerund, the 3rd person singular and plural of the preterite and tenses derived from these. Desleír is included in this category because its stem is to all intents and purposes desli-, and the «i» is not doubled in the tenses mentioned above as it should be in theory. All these verbs appear in the list of irregular verbs.

Verbs in -aer, -eer, -oer, -oír, -uir

Infinitive	Gerund	Preterite	Imperfect subjunctive	Future subjunctive
-aer	raer	rayendo	rayó..., rayeron	rayera..., rayese...
-eer	creer	creyendo	creyó..., creyeron	creyera..., creyese...
-oer	corroer	corroyendo	corroyó..., corroyeron	corroyera..., corroyese...
-oír	oír	oyendo	oyó..., oyeron	oyera..., oyese...
-uir	concluir	concluyendo	concluyó..., concluyeron	concluyera..., concluyese...

The common feature of the above verbs is that the unstressed «i» between two vowels changes to y. All these verbs appear in the list of irregular verbs.

Verbs in -car, -gar, -guar, -zar

	Infinitive	Present subjunctive	Preterite
-car : c → qu	tocar	toque...	toqué
-gar : g → gu	pagar	pague...	pagué
-guar: gu → gü	amortiguar	amortigüe...	amortigüé
-zar : z → c	alcanzar	alcance...	alcancé

Here the final consonant of the stem changes before endings beginning with -e, i.e. in the present subjunctive and the first person singular of the preterite of -ar verbs.

Verbs in -cer, -cir, -ger, -gir, -guir, -quir

	Infinitive	Present indicative	Present subjunctive
-cer, -cir: c → z	mecer	mezo	meza, mezas...
	resarcir	resarzo	resarza, resarzas...
-ger, -gir: g → j	proteger	protejo	proteja, protejas...
	dirigir	dirijo	dirija, dirijas...
-guir: gu → g	distinguir	distingo	distinga, distingas...
-quir: qu → c	delinquir	delinco	delinca, delincas...

Here the final consonant of the stem changes before an ending beginning with -o or -a, i.e. in the first person singular of the present indicative and in the present subjunctive of -er and -ir verbs.

Tonic stress on verbs in «-iar» and «-uar»

These verbs take a written accent on the i or the u of the stem in the singular and the 3rd person plural of the present indicative (confío, confías, confía..., confían), of the present subjunctive (gradúe, gradúes, gradúe..., gradúen) and in the 2nd person singular of the imperative (confía). There are exceptions to this rule, notably certain verbs ending in -iar (abreviar, acariciar, apreciar, copiar, estudiar, etc.) and all verbs ending in -cuar and -guar.

Groups of irregular verbs

The following pages contain a list of irregular Spanish verbs. Since certain irregularities are common to large groups of verbs, here is a summary of the most common changes which affect irregular verbs:

— o and e in the stem change to ue and ie respectively. Volar, helar, poder, perder, concernir and discernir are examples of verbs which undergo this change. The o and e become diphthongs when in a stressed position, i.e. in the 1st, 2nd and 3rd person singular and the 3rd person plural of the present indicative (vuelo, vuelas, vuelan) and of the present subjunctive (pierda, pierdas, pierdan), and also in the 2nd person singular of the imperative;

— e in the stem changes to i. This change affects all -ir verbs with an e in the stem which is not followed by r or nt, and also the verb servir. The e remains only when the ending of the verb begins with stressed i. It changes to i in all other cases, namely in the 1st, 2nd and 3rd person singular and the 3rd person plural of the present indicative (vido, vides, pide..., piden), in the 3rd person singular and plural of the preterite (pidió, pidieron), in the 2nd person singular of the imperative (pide), in the present subjunctive (pidas, pidas, etc.), the imperfect subjunctive (pidiera or pidiese, etc.), the future subjunctive (pidiere, pidieres, etc.), and the gerund (pidiendo);

— e in the stem becomes i in certain cases and ie in others. Verbs in -ir with an e in the stem followed by r or nt (except servir) fall into this category. These verbs undergo the same changes as the preceding group, except in the present indicative, the imperative and the present subjunctive where the diphthong ie replaces i in stressed positions (miento, mientes, miente..., mienten; miente; mienta, mientas, mienta..., mientan);

— o in the stem becomes u in certain cases and ue in others according to the same rules as for the above group. The main verbs in this class are morir and dormir;

— when the stem of a verb ends in vowel followed by c this c changes to zc before endings beginning with o or a. This category includes verbs ending in -acer, -ecer, -ocer, -ucir, except hacer, cocer, escocer and mecer. This change affects the first person singular of the present indicative (reconozco) and the present subjunctive (reconozca, reconozcas, etc.).

An added irregularity of verbs ending in -ducir is the preterite tense which ends in -duje, -dujiste, etc. (conduje, etc.), and consequently the imperfect and future subjunctive forms which end in -dujera or -dujese, etc. (condujera or condujese, etc.) and -dujere, etc. (condujere, etc.).

— verbs ending in -uir add a y after the u before the vowels a, o, e, that is in the 1st, 2nd and 3rd person singular and the 3rd person plural of the present indicative (huyo, huyes, huye..., huyen), in the 2nd person singular of the imperative (huye), in the 3rd person singular and plural of the preterite (huyó, huyeron), and in all forms of the subjunctive (huya, huyas, etc.; huyera, huyeras, etc.; huyere, huyeres, etc.).

Note: Some verbs combine several irregularities (despliegue, elija, persigo, etc.).
